Judge Clearwater Gives His Report As City's Historian

The following is the report of Judge Clearwater as City Historian for the year 1932 with the exception of the account of Washington's visit to Kingston in November, 1872, which heretofore has been printed.

To: The Honorable, the Mayor and the Common Council of the City of Kingston; and to The Division of History of the Department of Education of the State of New York;

Pursuant to the provisions of the Statute requiring a compressed annual report by the Historian of the city of Kingston relative to activities of historic importance during the year, I beg to present the following as to those of Kingston—its first capital—during the year 1932:

Retrospect. Notwithstanding the financial and emotional depression which seems to have disturbed the world, Kingston has held throughout the vicissitudes of the two hundred and fifty years of its civic life.

We have discharged our financial obligations. We have endeavored reasonably well to meet those of a religious, charitable, public and social character. Thus with a spirit of humility and thankfulness we turn to the immediate future without fear or remorseful reproach.

Washington Bicentennial. The most important event in the historic annals of the city during the year doubtless was the observance of the 200th anniversary of the birth of George Washington.

It was conducted under the auspices of a committee composed of citizens appointed by his Honor, Mayor Edgar J. Dempsey, who ably were aided by his successor, the Honorable Eugene B. Carey.

It was composed of the following citizens: Alphonse T. Clearwater, chairman; Eugene B. Carey, honorary chairman; Dr. George F. Chandler, Thomas J. Comerford, Edward C. Kendall, Bernard Culliton, Millard H. Davis, Edgar J. Dempsey, Philip E. Elting, Rabbi Victor Eppstein, C. Ray Everett, Harry H. Fleming, Bernard Forst, Joseph M. Fowler, G. D. B. Hasbrouck, Conrad J. Heiselman, Major O. R. Hiltabrant, John T. Loughran, Martin Oulton, Morris Samter, Harry E. Schirlick, John D. Schoonmaker, Donald Sweeney, Arthur H. Wicks, the Rev. Dr. Frank B. Seeley, the Very Rev. Dean Joseph B. Scully, Judge Frederick G. Traver.

The members of the Washington Bicentennial Committee, on the evening of Washington's birthday, gave a most appropriate and beautiful costume ball, many of the costumes worn at which were reproductions of those worn by their ancestors on the occasion of his visit to Kingston in November, 1782.

The members of the Kiwanis Club in consonance with their patriotic ideals invited your historian to deliver an address to it and its guests relative to that visit, an honor and invitation he gladly accepted. The address seems to have commended itself to the National Washington Bicentennial Commission, supplying as it did information regarding incidents in Washington's career, which had not otherwise been obtained by that commission.

National Commemoration. It may be permissible here to say that the National Washington Bicentennial Commission in its review of the celebration by 706,000 communities of the United States, expresses the opinion that for dignity, appropriateness, simplicity and beauty, Kingston stands among the highest, and that not the least of the reasons for this commendation is that the expenses of the celebration were borne by the members of the celebration committee without an appeal for either municipal or national aid.

Meeting of the General Synod of the Reformed Protestant Dutch Church in America. Another outstanding event was the meeting of the General Synod of the Reformed Protestant Dutch Church in America, which was held in the edifice of our own historic First Reformed Dutch Church.

It was attended not only by the distinguished clergymen of that denomination throughout this country and elsewhere, but by many eminent clerical and lay visitors from other denominations.

The bicentennial celebration and the Synodical Convention naturally drew the attention of the world to Kingston.

Governor Roosevelt's Visit. An incident of crowning importance in the bicentennial celebration ceremonies was the visit to Kingston on Memorial Day—May 30th—of the Honorable Franklin D. Roosevelt, governor of the state, now President-elect of the United States. His presence drew to Kingston approximately twenty thousand people.

Proposed New Income Tax Rates Equal Wartime Levy

Washington, Jan. 6 (AP).—The new income tax rates decided on by President-elect Roosevelt and Democratic congressional leaders in their conference in New York last night, equal the wartime levies, highest ever imposed by the United States.

They start from a basis two per cent higher than the rates in force this year, which in turn are much stiffer than any paid since the 1921 revenue law was supplanted.

The drop in exemptions, which will tax all unmarried men and women with $1,000 or more, and all married earners receiving $2,000 or more, compare with exemptions of $1,000 and $2,500 in force this year, and $1,500 and $3,500 on the taxes paid during 1932.

The program now to be attempted—six per cent on the first $4,000 of income and twelve per cent above that, plus a graduated surtax on incomes of $6,000 or more—was strongly advocated in the Senate last session by Coughens, Republican of Michigan, but despite considerable support was defeated in favor of four and eight per cent, with the same surtax.

The yield of the current income taxes remains to be shown after the March 15 payment date, when a huge proportion of the personal payments made in full. The estimate last June was that income tax receipts would be increased $53,000,000 by the higher normal income rates, $88,000,000 by the surtaxes and a further $27,000,000 by abolition of the earned income credit, or a total of $178,000,000.

At the newly proposed rates a married man with no dependents, earning $2,500 a year would pay the government $20 income tax. The single man earning the same amount would pay $30.

Democrats Planning Program To Balance The Federal Budget

New York, Jan. 6 (AP).—A Democratic program to balance the national budget now without the necessity of an extra session of the new Congress this spring has been evolved here at a conference between President-elect Franklin D. Roosevelt and congressional leaders.

The plan calls for an increase in income taxes; enactment of the proposed levy on 3.2 per cent beer; continuation of the gasoline tax and a $100,000,000 slash in appropriations below the Hoover budget.

The new tax plan provides for a boost in the normal income tax rates from 4 per cent on the first $4,000 net income and 8 per cent on income above that to 6 per cent and 12 per cent, respectively.

It also proposed a cut in exemptions for married persons from $2,500 to $2,000, and a continuation of the present slash for single persons from $1,500 to $1,000.

Mr. Roosevelt, who has banned the sales tax recommended by President Hoover, presided over the conference, which was held last night. In a subsequent talk with newspapermen he declined to comment except to say he did not disagree with these suggestions for legislation.

The Democrats said the Hoover estimate of the deficit for next year was $492,000,000. They accepted this disputed figure and based their calculations accordingly.

Their plan calls for raising $125,000,000 by the proposed levy on beer; $137,000,000 by continuation of the gas tax; reduction of an additional $100,000,000 in expenditures; and $130,000,000 by the new income tax rates.

The first general conference between the President-elect and congressional leaders—and probably the last for a while—lasted for more than two hours. It was also the pilots from Congress—Speaker Garner and Senator Robinson—who did the talking.

Predict Repeal Will Pass the Senate

Washington, Jan. 6 (AP).—Forecast of early Senate approval of a resolution to repeal the Eighteenth Amendment came from leaders to-day as a sharp division of opinion toward it developed among friends of prohibition.

Senator McNary, assistant Republican leader, predicted that the measure, approved by a Senate Judiciary subcommittee yesterday, would pass the Senate at this session of Congress. His view was echoed by others. The full committee will consider the proposal Monday and must approve it before it reaches the Senate.

The split among former leading prohibition supporters in that branch was emphasized by a statement from Senator Fess, Ohio Republican, indicating he would vote for the resolution.

"That does not differ in the main from the Republican position which I shall support," Fess said. Others who have indicated they would vote for the resolution in its present form include Senators Hastings (R., Del.) and Ashurst (D., Ariz.).

On the other hand, two prominent defenders of prohibition—Senators Sheppard (D., Tex.) and Borah (R., Idaho)—are withholding judgment. The only outright declaration of opposition has come from Senator Robinson, Indiana Republican.

Plan For Highways. Albany, N. Y., Jan. 6 (AP).—The New York State Construction Council today sent letters to Governor Lehman and the state senators and assemblymen asking them not to curtail the state highway construction program in the interest of economy.

Treasury Receipts. Washington, Jan. 6 (AP).—Treasury receipts for January 4 were $4,395,735.72; expenditures $19,982,637.64; balance $13,433,436.19; customs duties for four days of January were $1,678,455.31.

2 Local Orchestras Will Furnish Music For Shriners' Ball

The Kingston Shriners' Association will depart this year from its usual custom of engaging an out of town orchestra to play opposite a local orchestra for its big ball to be held in the new armory on Friday evening, January 20, and instead will have two orchestras composed entirely of local musicians as it is felt that due to the general unemployment situation local musicians should be given the preference.

Shriners are confident that everyone will be glad to learn that they have engaged Paul Zucca and his excellent orchestra, together with John Erno and his splendid orchestra and both orchestras will be largely augmented for the occasion with Kingston's finest artists.

Each orchestra will be located at opposite ends of the big drill hall of the new armory and will alternate so that the music for dancing will be continuous.

Tickets are now being sold by the Shriners and everything points to Friday evening, January 20, as being a gala night for the lovers of the dance. The entire proceeds will be for the children of the Industrial Home.

Wants State Model Liquor Control Law. Albany, N. Y., Jan. 6 (AP).—Governor Lehman wants "A model liquor control law" for New York as well as effective machinery for the sale and distribution of beer.

Amplifying his recommendation for the creation by the legislature of a commission to study control of alcoholic beverages in anticipation of congressional action to eliminate the Volstead Act and the 18th Amendment, Mr. Lehman said "I want the whole matter of beer and liquor control studied."

Apparently, he added at a press conference last night, "most people thought I referred in my message to the legislature only to beer."

The governor revealed that he next Monday will discuss the scope of the work he hopes will be done by the commission he proposed. Mr. Lehman asked the legislature to appoint the commission to report by February 15. The legislature will resume its deliberations next Monday night.

Floods Sweeping Tennessee Country

Memphis, Tenn., Jan. 6 (AP).—Valley dwellers where the St. Francis river separates northeastern Arkansas from southeastern Missouri are fleeing for higher ground today as flood waters poured through five levees breaks and gushed over some 65,000 acres of lowlands.

The river was falling in the vicinity of Kennett, Mo., as the breaches relieved pressure from upstream but down at Big Lake near Blytheville, Ark., a crew of 150 worked to sand-bag barriers against rises there.

Meanwhile, through the Mississippi delta and elsewhere that swollen streams have caused concern, tension slackened as anticipated heavy rains failed to materialize.

The Tallahatchie river and Cassidy bayou still bothered the delta communities of Sumner, Glendora, Webb and Swan Lake, but the waters were rising more slowly. Swan Lake and Webb were cut off from highway communication.

Former Supreme Court Justice Brown Dead

Belmont, N. Y., Jan. 6 (AP).—Former Supreme Court Justice Charles E. Brown, 73, died suddenly at his home here today from a heart attack.

Justice Brown retired from the supreme bench on January 1, 1929, after almost 25 years of service. Survivors are two sons, Charles E. Brown of Niagara Falls, and Harold Brown, a Buffalo attorney.

Republicans Answer Charges Concerning Proposed Bond Issue

Republican aldermen have written and signed the following communication to Mayor Eugene B. Carey, and it is to be delivered to him some time today. The communication concerns the proposed bond issue of the Democratic administration and the substitute proposal of the Republicans, which would give more work to unemployed men if adopted.

Kingston, N. Y., January 6, 1933. Hon. Eugene B. Carey, Mayor. Dear Mayor:

During the entire time that an additional Work Relief appropriation has been under consideration, we have maintained that, with over 1,700 unemployed men registered, it will be necessary to spend every dollar of the $100,000.00, for wages, and wages only, in order that all—not some—of the unemployed may get enough days work per month of which to live. You refuse to approve this plan.

Out of the money appropriated last year for Work Relief, you bought a new steam roller for the Board of Public Works, repaired the city's stone crusher, painted and repaired public buildings and park equipment, removed ice, snow and leaves from streets, etc. This is the work ordinarily paid for by the Board of Public Works out of the large sums appropriated each year for their use. This saves the Board of Public Works considerable money.

If the Work Relief performs part of the function of the Board of Public Works, why shouldn't the Board of Public Works buy their own equipment and supply the tools and equipment necessary to do the work? We believe it should. You refuse to agree.

You must not forget that the more money is spent for materials by the Work Relief the less goes to the unemployed. You must not forget, too, that the state returns 40% of what the Work Relief spends for wages and nothing for materials. The more money we spend for wages, the more money we get back to spend over again.

In order to hasten action on this most important measure so that our unemployed may be put to work without any further delay, under circumstances most favorable to the taxpayer, we again urge you to instruct the Corporation Counsel to prepare an ordinance appropriating $100,000 for Work Relief, the entire amount, plus state reimbursements, to be spent for wages, and that you call at once a special meeting of the common council. As repeatedly stated, we will vote unanimously in favor of such a resolution.

Chinese and Japs Renew Hostilities

(By The Associated Press) Hostilities were reported renewed today between Chinese and Japanese troops drawn up on opposite shores of a river between the northwestern Chinese cities of Shanhaiwan and Chingwangtao.

Foreign observers in the area, however, said the Japanese gave no indication of starting an advance farther along the railroad which leads to Tientsin and Peking.

A Shanghai dispatch said an exchange of rifle fire began between the opposing lines and from Peking came word that Japanese planes were bombing villages north of Shanhaiwan.

This is the direction the Japanese would take for a campaign into Jehol, which has long been predicted by Chinese and threatened by Japanese military leaders. They came into Shanhaiwan this week along the Manchurian coast from the northwest. The eastern course into Jehol, however, is up the Luan river, 60 miles southwest of Shanhaiwan by the railroad.

Chinese officials at Nanking said peace negotiations were off and that Japanese claims they would "localize" the conflict at Shanhaiwan were a "smokescreen" for further movements.

General Ho, ousted Chinese commander of Shanhaiwan, blamed the 1901 Boxer treaty, permitting troops of Japan and other world powers in North China, for his defeat.

Chinese newspapers criticized "lukewarm" Chinese military leaders and lauded the "Shanhaiwan heroes."

KINGSTON MASONIC CLUB DIRECTORS ELECT OFFICERS

The annual meeting of Kingston Masonic Club was held Thursday evening at 31 Albany avenue, the former Gray property, which at present is used for the club rooms. The following directors were elected for a term of three years: Charles B. Everett, Irving J. Rose and Sam Stern. The six other directors are: Fred A. Webster, Harry S. Hutton, James Mow, Arthur Barnes, Harry D. Fry, Charles Merrill.

Following the annual meeting, the board of directors met to organize and elect the officers for the ensuing year. Those elected were: Arthur J. Barnes, president; Samuel Stern, vice president; Harry D. Fry, treasurer; Harry S. Hutton, secretary.

Mrs. Coolidge Faces Loss of Her Husband With Great Courage

Northampton, Mass., Jan. 6 (AP).—Grace Goodhue Coolidge was today facing the heart-rending loss of her husband with the same magnificent courage and poise with which she had shared Calvin Coolidge's early struggles and later the burdens of the chief executive of the United States.

It was she who was the first to see her husband on the floor of his dressing room. She knelt beside him, and she knew he was dead. She ran downstairs, stopped at the landing, and called to Harry Ross, the former President's secretary and friend: "My husband is dead." Her voice was described by Ross as "Calm, although she was greatly affected."

Her presence at her husband's side was symbolic. For it was she who was ever at his side in life—constant companion and help-mate from the days when the young Vermont farmer boy, with a job in a local law office, took her from her job teaching at the Clarke School for the Deaf and Dumb to be his bride in 1905. She was 26 at the time.

"We New England women cling to the old ways," she once said, "and being the President's wife isn't going to make me think less about the domestic things I've always loved."

Mrs. Coolidge had that rare and unique quality of being able to be the wife of a great and illustrious man and yet maintain her own individuality.

The tragic business of making the necessary funeral arrangements was carried on with the same remarkable poise and unflinching courage which caused her to be recognized as typifying an American ideal.

And today, while all the world mourns with her, the same spirit which graced the White House for five years, delighting the great and charming the humble, was still sustaining her. Even as her partner in life would have had her—she was her splendid self.

Recalls His Brevity In Use of Words

New York, Jan. 6 (AP).—Another illustration of Calvin Coolidge's brevity in use of words was recalled today by Dr. Cornelius Greenway, pastor of a Brooklyn church.

While a sophomore at Tufts College in 1922, Dr. Greenway wrote letters to President Harding, Vice President Coolidge and the members of the Harding cabinet asking what the "aims and duty of a college man should be."

Coolidge's reply consisted of 17 words. It read: "The aims and duty of a college man should be to behave himself and to work hard."

Dr. Greenway met Coolidge later when he was a guest preacher at a church in Washington which he attended.

CANDIDUS AUTOGRAPH BOOK HAD COOLIDGE. The sudden death of Calvin Coolidge, ex-president of the United States, marks the fourth time that a notable has died who has contributed his signature to the autograph collection in the possession of Eugene W. Candidus, formerly of this city and Flatbush.

Ex-President Coolidge sent his signature to Mr. Candidus in the summer of 1930, just after the latter's graduation from Kingston High School. It was post marked Northampton, Mass., July 11, 1930, at 6:30 p. m.

Others in the Candidus autograph collection who have died since contributing their signatures are: Charles M. Stedman, last Congress member to take active part in the Civil War; Robert Dollar, steamship magnate; and Thomas A. Edison, inventor.

HOW HE DESTROYED THE "WHITE HOUSE SPOKESMAN". Washington, Jan. 6 (AP).—Among the stories retold today on Calvin Coolidge was the occasion and the manner of his destroying the "White House Spokesman"—mythical character created by capital newspapermen to avoid direct quotation of the President.

At a press conference on a dull summer's day when news was at a premium, Mr. Coolidge proceeded to demolish this ghost of the mass media. The reporters scribbled busily. A front page story!

Quite evidently aware of their enthusiasm, Mr. Coolidge waited until they turned to leave, then with a twinkle in his eye: "Gentlemen, what I have said is for your own information, and not for publication."

There was no obituary for the "White House Spokesman."

VON HINDENBURG SENDS REGRETS TO PRESIDENT

Berlin, Jan. 5 (AP).—President Paul von Hindenburg expressed sympathy because of the death of Calvin Coolidge in a cable message today to President Hoover.

"I beg to express to your excellency my deepest felt condolence because of former President Coolidge's demise."

Simple Funeral Rites For Calvin Coolidge Saturday

Unostentatious Services In Edwards Congregational Church Will Be Followed By Burial In His Native Vermont—President Hoover Will Head Notables at Services—Tributes Come From Throughout The World.

Northampton, Mass., Jan. 6 (AP).—Calvin Coolidge goes to his long rest tomorrow amid the austere hills of his native Vermont and the thoughts of a nation he led will follow the simple cortege.

The services will be as simple as his life. That is the keynote of the funeral under preparation today for the 30th president—struck down yesterday by a heart attack that came swiftly and left him dead with an expression of peace on his face.

While expressions of mourning came from all over the world, plans were laid for a funeral that despite its unostentatious features, will be a notable one in the nation's history.

President Herbert Hoover will come from Washington for the services at 10:30 a. m., eastern standard time tomorrow at Edwards Congregational Church—the historic structure on Main street named for Jonathan Edwards long ago.

Congressional leaders will come too, and groups of distinguished people from many cities—Washington, New York, Boston and others. The choir in which Mrs. Coolidge has often sung will add its voices to the services for the dead, and there will be brief eulogies.

Afterward a simple motor procession will start for Plymouth, Vt., more than 100 miles away, to lay the "Silent President" beside his father and his son, Calvin. The burial, simpler even than the services, will take place in the late afternoon.

Died As He Had Lived. Mr. Coolidge died much as he had lived—alone. At "The Beeches", the home in which he sought seclusion, that tree-clad dwelling to which he repaired when the cares of a nation fell from his shoulders, the former president succumbed to a fatal heart attack.

But he had whipped alder fringed Vermont streams—alone, and quickened to the plunge of a speckled trout.

He had heard, alone, the heart-stopping whirr of the partridge as it left its tangled covert, when frosted autumn leaves called him to the hunting grounds of his ancestors.

So Calvin Coolidge was found, alone in his dressing room. No one saw the spirit depart, yesterday, after he had returned from his law office. His secretary waited below, until he should be dismissed for lunch. Grace, his wife, found him, as she returned home from family marketing.

Earlier in the day Harry Ross, the secretary, had been called upon by the former president to consider a jig-saw puzzle, a New Year's gift. Apparently Mrs. Coolidge had been working on it. Ross did not think the former president had placed any of the intricate pieces in position.

Mrs. Coolidge had been away, to town, shopping, when the former president died. He asked her if she cared to use the car, relic of the days they spent in Washington. "It is too nice a day, I'd rather walk," she told him.

To Be Buried In Plymouth. And so, home to that rugged land of his ancestors, all that was mortal of Calvin Coolidge will thread the hills and valleys that separate Massachusetts, a state that honored him before the nation, to Plymouth, Vermont, in a motor cortege Saturday. There to lie with his father, John, who swore him in by the light of an oil lamp as the nation's chief executive many years ago, and his son, Calvin, Jr., cut off in young manhood.

The national cemetery at Arlington, with customary caisson and military escort, cannot call to its verdant folds that which is mortal of Calvin Coolidge.

Back to the thin surface of soil from which his ancestors fought a livelihood, after simple services in Edwards Congregational Church here, will go the body of Calvin Coolidge.

Each Sunday Calvin and Grace Coolidge attended services at the Edwards Congregational Church. They left promptly, at the end of the services, before curious or others, could intrude. There will be an organist and a choir. Saturday morning, Grace Coolidge had been accustomed to add her voice to that choir, and found in the recent Christmas musical program an enchantment obnoxious to the congregation.

The widespread desire of people in official life to honor the former president will make the funeral a most impressive ceremony despite the desire to keep the services simple and brief.

The presidential special, carrying President Hoover from Washington, will arrive Saturday morning and another special train, carrying Congressional representatives and other high officials, is expected.

Tributes Throughout The World. Heartfelt tributes came from throughout the world. The home folk, back in Coolidge's native Vermont hills, were shocked by the suddenness of his death. There was no comment or visible signs of sorrow in Plymouth, Vt. Men and women went about their

The three were unable to climb on the ice shelf to which they had pushed the girl. Their bodies were found in 10 feet of water.

The Treasure-Seekers
Beaches near New York city, otherwise nearly deserted, are the scenes of treasure hunts in autumn days. Men and boys go there armed with shovels and homemade sieves. After sifting the sieves with sand they strain it out by shaking. What remains is usually clam shells and broken glass, but sometimes there are coins and rings dropped by bathers in the summer.

Double Interest In Royal Birthday

King Boris May Become Parent On Or Near His 39th Anniversary.

Sofia (P)—All Bulgaria is looking forward to King Boris' birthday with special interest this year.

At 42 to the throne is expected soon, and it is considered not at all unlikely that the child may be born on or about January 30, when Boris will celebrate his 39th anniversary.

Fetes In Prospect

Should the dates coincide the rejoicing will be great. Many would consider it a good omen.

But the populace looks forward in any case to the celebration of both events within the same fortnight.

Whether boy or girl, the first child of Boris and Queen Ioanna will be welcomed with a warmth of affection reminiscent of the reception accorded the queen when her husband brought her from Italy two years ago. On that occasion the celebration lasted three days and three nights.

Succession At Stake

Should the child be a boy, the popular rejoicing would be doubled, for Bulgaria's constitution prescribes direct succession by the male line.

Many eager patriots are already predicting what the crown prince will be called. Some say his name will be Simeon, in remembrance of Czar Simeon the Great, who reigned from 993 to 1014—more than a thousand years ago. Others predict he will be christened Ivan, after a ruler of the 13th century.

The expected event naturally also renews speculation as to the religion in which any children of Boris and Ioanna will be brought up.

Latent Powers
Let us recognize our latent powers, and boldly devote ourselves to their unfoldment and use.

Dogs Live 15 Years
The average life span of a dog is fifteen years. In this the dog is ahead of the cat by about two years.

War Dead Honored
Rumania has a perpetual flame to honor its World war dead in Bucharest, and Belgium has one in Brussels.

King Boris and Queen Ioanna of Bulgaria, Europe's youngest reigning couple, are awaiting the birth of their first-born. The event is expected about January 30 when the King will be 39 years old. The prospective mother, formerly Princess Giovanna of Italy, was 23 in November. She is shown in Bulgarian costume.

up. The Pope specified a Catholic marriage for Ioanna but official circles point out that Boris made no promises in respect to the religious training of children.

Besides, the Bulgarian constitution requires the sovereign and the heir to the throne to profess the Orthodox faith of Bulgaria's national autonomous church.

Tricks of Magic Entertain Kiwanis

Charles G. Bagley of Catskill entertained members of the Kiwanis Club at the Governor Clinton Hotel on Thursday noon with a series of amazing tricks of magic that was a welcome diversion from the usual run of programs, and was well received by the Kiwanians who injected considerable merriment into the occasion.

The new president, Howard R. St. John, who will be installed with other newly elected officers at a special ceremony next Friday evening, was in charge of the program; and he had the tables arranged in a new formation similar to an open square.

Proceeding the entertainment the following guests were introduced: William Chase of Kingston, Assistant District Attorney N. LeVan Haver of Kingston; M. F. Terwilliger of Ashban, and M. M. Rixy of Roseton. The magician performed several tricks and several sleight-of-hand numbers, all of which received marked applause. The musical program for the occasion was in charge of Paul Zocco, accompanied at the piano by Danny Blitzer.

STONE LION AT TURIN TO RECALL TRAU RELICS

Turin, Italy (P)—Turin University students have decided to erect here a huge stone lion to replace similar symbols recently destroyed in the Dalmatian town of Trau.

Fire in New Palts

New Palts, Jan. 6.—On Tuesday evening at 9:15 the fire alarm sounded and the fire boys responded immediately to a fire in the tenant house of Samuel Waring which was occupied by Mr. Polhemus and family.

The fire started in the chimney and with the quick aid of the firemen they prevented a dangerous fire. Considerable damage was done by water and chemicals. The damage to the building will probably amount to $100.

Ashokan Reservoir Assessment Hearing

Model in Minimum of Ashokan Reservoir Section Offered in Proceeding By City of New York.

Hearings are being held before Referee Mambert in the town of Olive certiorari proceedings wherein the city of New York seeks to review the assessment of the Ashokan reservoir property in the town of Olive. The city's contention is that the assessments are too high and are being aired before the referee.

County Attorney Robert G. Groves and Harry H. Fleming appear for the town and the assessors.

A rather interesting model in miniature of the Ashokan reservoir section has been offered in the proceeding by the city of New York. The model is enclosed in a case and represents the Ashokan reservoir section of the town of Olive showing principally the structures and a portion of the two basins of the reservoir. The model is made to scale and shows the various gate houses, dams, and a portion of the big reservoir, together with elevations and the streams which flow through the section as well as the various channels within the basin.

One of the intentions of the model is to show the construction of the plant and structures as actually constructed and to also show that had the reservoir been constructed at an elevation of 530 instead of 539 the same aqueduct could have been used and the same flow of water taken advantage of and that the city would have gained the same benefits without the investment which was made, except that storage capacity would have been more limited. This theory tends to indicate that while the city did construct the plant at the higher level the same purpose would have been served by less expensive structures and that therefore the present plant should not be assessed so high but in accordance with the result which the city gets, rather than the replacement or cost value.

The assessors of the town assessed the property on its value after engineers had viewed the plant and figured its replacement or construction cost. It is the contention of the assessors that in accordance with court decisions this is the proper method of assessing the plant and that the assessments laid are not excessive but are based on the cost of the construction or the replacement value of the structures and land.

ISSUE WARNING ABOUT FAKE VETERAN LOTTERY

Over the police teletype this morning came a warning against a fake lottery being conducted in New York state. The message came from Syracuse and stated that the lottery known as the New York State Veterans' Charitable Supper and Benefit scheduled to be held January 21-23 in the Syracuse armory was a fake. Veterans Post No. 5 of Syracuse stated that it had nothing to do with the enterprise and the message also carried the information that the armory was hired for an automobile show on the dates mentioned. BROADER EDUCATION.

The case for broader education in colleges and universities is taken up by many educators. A professor in the Harvard Law School says he has found that "any allusion to science, literature or history is sure to be meaningless to at least half the college graduates in the class room." Yet law has so many contacts that it is important for the lawyer's success to have a working knowledge of many other subjects, particularly of economics, political science, psychology, history and the methods of the natural sciences. Another educator, the president of Carnegie Institute of Technology, pleads for a broader education for engineers. Engineering courses, he says, should include more of the humanities. He would have technicians as much at home with social, economic and political problems as with those belonging strictly to their own field.

Dr. A. Lawrence Lowell, retiring president of Harvard University, spoke of this same thing at a recent meeting of educators.

"We need men," he said, "who can stand in the doorway between two subjects and see a little of both. We have got to start all over again and learn how to teach people something of other special subjects; teach geologists something of chemistry and physics and astronomy, so that they may use these in geology and use the knowledge of men in other sciences."

None of these educators mentioned preparation for fullest enjoyment of leisure as one of the important reasons for a broad, cultural education. If we are to have more leisure in the future, along with our work, we will get more pleasure and satisfaction from it in proportion to the number of our genuine interests and the breadth of our outlook. Also men can work together better for society's good if they have learned that there are other interests than their own special ones.

EXTRAVAGANCE.

A newspaper man taking a railroad trip during the holidays met with a big surprise. He found the Pullman cars crowded and the coaches half empty. When he had expected to find the opposite situation. It was a day train, and the Pullman passengers might easily have ridden in the coaches.

Thinking it over, he figured the thing out as a typical example of American psychology. The passengers were obviously a holiday crowd attracted by the cheap excursion rates. Having earned money on the straight fare, he concluded, they were using most of the saving to enjoy the luxury of Pullman accommodations. They would consider such indulgence was legitimate. "That would puzzle a Frenchman," says the traveler. "He would never be able to correlate crowded Pullmans and half-empty coaches with the existence of an acute and general depression."

No, the Frenchman wouldn't. The French are like that. They save and save. Many a doughboy came home from the war testifying that a Scotchman or a Hebrew would never have a chance in France. But there is another factor in American psychology which may have had more to do with this case than the one mentioned. The typical American, in periods of forced economy, just has to go and "blow himself" to something foolish or luxurious once in a while. Then his soul feels better, and he can cheerfully go back to short rations again.

A Swedish philanthropist asks King Gustaf to administer a fund for the benefit of blind people, Laplanders and animals. The King is willing to do as requested for the blind people and the animals, but prefers to let the Laplanders alone. "Do not force upon them," he says. "The doubtful blessing of civilization and the evil eye of obstructive tourists." There is a wise king. Or at least, he seems so just now, as we survey the present world. Savages seem to get along pretty well, not making much progress, but not stepping back, either, except when civilized man comes along to give them his diseases and his "mania of owning things." Our civilization is not quite so cocky as it was. The poor, benighted Laplanders, in their happy ignorance, might consider it cockeyed. If there is to be any intermingling, they might send an expedition or two and see what they could do for the rest of us. As for funds, they have none—and no debts, either.

France, after deciding that she could not pay that war debt installment of $15,000,000 to the United States, is now lending $14,000,000 to Austria. Her action a natural sarcasm comment. Yet why carp and gird at France? She was holding back our money, it seems, as a matter of principle. Here there is a ray of hope. If she will lend to Austria, maybe she will lend to us—as long as we don't say too much about our war debts. France likes to lead money, and might take pleasure in lending us some—privately. She has long been the banker of Europe, why not of America? Maybe Americans who have just about lost hope of getting any real estate loans from our new Federal Home Loan Banks could get what they need from France.

SUSPECTED TEETH

I believe that thoughtful physicians and thoughtful dentists are of the opinion that in addition to taking the first two or three years of their college work together, the dentist should put in at least three to six months about a hospital.

Every physician spends a considerable portion of the last three years of his course seeing sick people in the hospital. The dentist spends the latter part of his course seeing well people who come to the college dispensary to have teeth filled or removed, or have other work done on the mouth.

The physician in seeing only sick patients learns the reasons why they are sick and the cause in a number of cases is infected teeth.

You can thus see that the physician after finding no other cause for ailment but infected teeth, is almost sure as Dr. T. A. Buckley, Mt. Vernon, N. Y., points out, to order the teeth removed at once. The dentist on the other hand seeing so many apparently well patients in his office, despite some infected teeth, is naturally anxious to save the teeth.

It is just here that the dentist should really go into the family and personal history of a case before he does any extensive work about the teeth because it is easily possible for a patient to look well yet have had acute attacks of rheumatism and be actually suffering from heart disease.

One of the present controversies among dentists themselves and between dentists and physicians is whether or not teeth from which the pulp (including the nerve) has been removed, should be left in the mouth.

Dr. Charles Mayo, the surgeon, and Dr. Weston Price, the outstanding dental research worker, believe that pulpless teeth are a menace to health, particularly the teeth with more than one root. Although it is admitted that some pulpless teeth may be free of infection, it must be admitted also that perhaps nine out of ten are not, and are a constant menace to health.

The thought then when you are about to have any extensive work done in the mouth would be to have your dentist and physician talk the matter over. The physician may be able to give the dentist sufficient information about your own condition or the family tendency toward rheumatism and heart disease, that the dentist readily agrees to have the suspected teeth removed.

Buying Barbara

by John Chitt-Adams & Author of "THE CATS' MEOW"

Barbara, who had been waiting for him to come, was sitting on the sofa, looking at her watch. She was a beautiful girl, with dark hair and eyes, and she was wearing a blue dress. She was looking at her watch because she was late for her date with Mark. She was waiting for him to come, but he had not yet arrived. She was looking at her watch because she was late for her date with Mark. She was waiting for him to come, but he had not yet arrived.

Chapter 22

UNPREDICTABLE PATSY

Miss Raoul's fury was short-lived. Before she had crossed Brandish Place she was laughing. "Whose fur saw first?" she demanded in perfectly easy English. "His, I think, but I can't be sure. The chattering little ape!"

"Mark—or you?"

"Mark, of course! I may have the face of a monkey but he has the soul of one and it was our souls we were discussing."

"I heard you."

"It is a great pity I lost my temper in front of the other man."

"But I'm not paying you to work up an affair with him," pointed out Lella sweetly. "In any case—he wants to marry someone who doesn't want to marry him and nothing makes a man more blind and deaf to every other specimen of exquisite young womanhood.... No, not meaning me. I intended to marry him; but I never thought I cared about him. Neither did he. So we're friends, instead."

"What is this girl of his like? Beautiful?"

"Yes," admitted Lella. "She's the most beautiful girl I've ever seen. And clever. And good. And a fool."

"Any clever woman is a fool to be good," declared Miss Raoul, turning briskly into the Park. "Why won't she take Armitage?"

"She loves Mark Lodely."

Miss Raoul emitted a screech of laughter.

"And whom does Mark love?"

"Mark."

"Hurry up! commanded Miss Raoul. "I have to go to Malavie's before the theatre. I hope he has finished your Mark's studio because my place must be re-done at once. I've just decided it."

"That day we first met, in New York, you told me it was perfect."

"That was because I was in New York. I was homesick. I was in a condition to say anything. The moment I got back I saw that the whole atmosphere is wrong. It tries to tone me down. It almost apologizes for me. That's fatal. I want a setting that will make the most of my ugliness. They say Malavie's might be able to do it."

"I don't think so. His studio for Mark was not particularly inspired. Divans, screens, all the usual clutter. Patsy, I wish you'd try this girl instead."

"Which girl?"

Lella tried to recapture discretion.

"The girl who decorated and furnished my home in the country. It's been enormously admired. And she did our flat here in Town or some of it. She's the cleverest kid—she designs my clothes, too."

"I wondered where you got them; I felt sure you couldn't afford them from the big shops and you need a lot of dressing." Miss Raoul tossed her poodle into the air and caught it again. "I am an eccentric, you know. The money you're paying me to ramp Mark is just about what Malavie's will ask for doing the whole of my house. Pay me half and the girl's fee, instead. What's her name?"

"Barbara Real name."

"Is that her real name?"

To her own surprise Lella threw up her head.

"Quentin has been a west-country name for centuries. So has Lodely. They don't need to assume them."

The next instant she regretted the flash of spirit.

"Well now, my name isn't Raoul. It isn't even Patsy. I long for London when I'm in New York and for Paris when I'm in Berlin—I'm at home nowhere except on the boards and I've been pelted off them, twice, and shall be again."

Miss Raoul seized the door of a taxi which happened to be cruising past, and hurried herself inside. Before Lella could move away, her and pack. She continued to tell herself that she would do better to go away and pack—and she walked steadily back to Armitage's house. Through the Park, over the bridge, down Brandish Place.

And all the time she knew well enough that she would not invite herself to stay in any house that sheltered Mark.

She walked up to the house and put her foot on the step. She had better go in and see Armitage and tell him she couldn't after all, earn that emerald. She was inevitably and eternally on Mark's side—because between her and Mark there lay an emerald, too. She might be a provincial and a gate-crasher and an accessory after a very crooked fact, but she could be straight in just this one respect—Mark.

She stood there, her hands damp, her chin trembling.

Then the mood was lifted from her. The whole chaotic misery lightened and passed. She breathed freely and sauntered away. No loyalty to Mark, no such nonsense. She could grin at the thought. No loyalty to Armitage except for the sake of an emerald. Finish with Patsy Raoul, if Patsy desired it. And the dust-bump at Kings Mallard? Rather fun to blackmail father about that. Why has that never occurred to me before? She lit a cigarette.

Mark makes the most of a very profitable situation, tomorrow.

LADIES' AID OF FIRST REFORMED ELCTN OFFICERS

The annual meeting of the Ladies' Aid Society of the First Reformed Church was held with Mrs. William Cranston on Wednesday and was largely attended. The annual report of the treasurer showed that the society had earned over $1,200 the past year.

The secretary's report showed a glowing resume of the year's activities which were of both a social and business nature. The following officers were elected for the coming year: Mrs. O. D. B. Ingals, president; Mrs. Joetta Snyder, first vice president; Mrs. Tams Hunsbeck, second vice president; Mrs. William A. Frey, third vice president; Mrs. George Van Anden, fourth vice president; Mrs. W. Dean Hays, secretary; Mrs. James Low, treasurer.

During the year the society was the recipient of a $100 bond, a legacy from the late Mrs. T. D. Lewis, a former member.

Mrs. Cranston and Mrs. A. D. Rose served tea and cakes and a social hour was enjoyed.

November 15, 1933, was set for the annual turkey dinner.

THE CITY OF LONDON IS NOT THE CAPITAL OF ENGLAND—NEITHER IS IT THE LARGEST CITY IN THE BRITISH ISLES.

AN ELECTRIC LOCOMOTIVE, ONE INCH LONG, THAT CAN PULL A LOAD 6 TIMES ITS OWN WEIGHT.

Westminster, which is apart from the City of London, although it is a part of Greater London, is the capital of England. Westminster, like the city, is one of the 29 divisions which are united together as greater London is known today.

The City of London is the heart of London, an ancient center about which the city grew. The city, in fact, is one of the smallest of the 29 divisions making up Greater London. It is not the largest city in the world—not even the largest city in England.

The normal human being has 10 distinct senses instead of five, or even six, as is generally stated, according to the American Medical Association. Sight is divided into three varieties, the eye being sensitive to light, color and form. Touch is divided into four parts: the ability to feel changes of shape; the ability to distinguish a tickle; the feeling of vibration; and sensing of strain or pressure. The other three conventional senses, taste, smell and hearing, are not divided.

chores hiding their feelings, like the man they mourned.Mrs. Coolidge still wore her street costume when she came upon her husband prostrate on the floor. She hurried down the staircase, calling for Harry Ross, who was more than a secretary—perhaps a companion—to the former president."She bore up bravely, remarkably bravely," said Ross afterwards.
And then Ross called the family doctor, and Mrs. Coolidge's son, John, from New Haven. John came to Northampton as fast as an automobile could bring him, and then came Frank W. Stearns, Boston merchant, known since the days Calvin Coolidge occupied the State House at Boston as his adviser. Elderly Frank Stearns was so overcome by the sudden and unexpected termination of a long standing friendship that he could not discuss it, even through a secretary who accompanied him.William Whiting, Holyoke paper manufacturer, who succeeded Herbert Hoover as secretary of commerce, and his wife, were among the first to arrive after death spread its wings over the "Beeches". They arrived as messenger boys peddled up the gravelled walk with missives of condolences from the nation's great—Herbert Hoover, his succesor, Alfred E. Smith, who sought that honor.

Trains Debarb Notables

There were other messages, and wires still hum. Trains will continue to debarb notables—even the President is expected—but those who will follow Calvin Coolidge will trace a tortuous trail, through the hills and valleys and "notches"— more than a hundred miles to the northward—to the ancestral home of the Coolidges, Plymouth, Vt.There Calvin Coolidge told his secretary a few minutes before he died, he hoped to spend longer annual stays as the years advanced.Saturday he will return to the chortling trout streams of Vermont, to the alder thickets where the ruffed grouse drum—to the cloud fringed hill tops of his birth.Judge Clearwater

Gathering Coconuts

The bureau of plant industry says that coconuts will generally drop from the tree when they are ripe. The nuts on the lowest fruiting branches will naturally ripen first. It is very difficult to tell from the exterior of a coconut whether or not it is ripe and the only sure way is to open it. If the coconut is desired for the milk the nut should be gathered just before ripening; that is, before it is ready to fall.PUFFY"Puffy, I'm sorry as sorry can be.

GAS BUGGIES—The Expert.

We'd like to ask you this: Have any of your friends or neighbors ever dropped in to borrow your weekly collection of handbills or circular letters that some users seem to think are as good as advertising in your home paper?

Man—Bill hung up his stockings on Christmas Eve.
Neighbor—What did he get?
Man—A notice from the health department.

Man who is refreshingly frank, said this today: "If I could live my life over again I probably would be a failure again."

He—When the elevator fell with you I suppose all your sins flashed before your eyes?
She—Not at all. We only dropped five stories.

There are a good many days until time to shop for Christmas but it won't be long until we hear something or other about a much referred to animal known as the ground hog. Wonder if he is any relation to the end seat hog? If so, we don't think much of him.

Look Around You
Life should be full of earnest work. Our hearts unalashed by fortune's frown.
Let perseverance conquer fate. And merit seize the victor's crown.
The battle is not to the strong. The race not always to the fleet. And he who seeks to pluck the stars May lose the jewels at his feet.

The difference between getting a job and getting a husband these days, giggles Giggling Gertie, is that it is difficult to find a job you can keep and equally as difficult to find a husband who can keep you.

Man—My wife is having hysterics. Can you let me have something to quiet her?
Neighbor—Sorry, old man, but I haven't got a cent!

A Kingston man says he doesn't like to help his wife clean house, because he never knows whether to use the vacuum cleaner or the lawn mower on the grass rugs.

Time was when a girl took a husband "for better or worse." Now it appears that she has taken him for wetter or worse.

During the day Mrs. Brown discharged her old maid and hired a new one, who answered the door bell when Mr. Brown arrived home in the evening. He carried a bunch of roses which he handed to the maid, saying:

Mr. Brown—Present these to Mrs. Brown, telling her I want to see her at once.
New Maid—All right, but you better make it snappy, because she expects the old man any minute now.

The following amusing epitaph was noticed on the tombstone of Solomon Pease, in the Springfield, Ill., cemetery, not far from the tomb of President Abraham Lincoln. The epitaph was said to have been written by Mr. Pease himself a number of years before his death:
Under this sod, and under these trees,
Here lies the pod of Solomon Pease.
He is not in this hole—it's only his pod.
He's shelled out his soul and gone up to God.

Floor-walker (to a harassed-looking customer)—Are you looking for something in men's clothing, sir?
Mere Man—Certainly not. I'm looking for something in women's clothing. I've lost my wife.

"MORE TIME FOR BEER"
NEW AUSTRALIAN SLOGAN

Sydney. (AP)—A campaign to permit Australian saloons to remain open until 3 o'clock at night has been started here. In most states bars now must close at 6 o'clock.

Brewery interests and a vociferous section of the public are clamoring for "more time to drink beer." The agitation has aroused opposition from church sources.

WEST SHOKAN.

West Shokan, Jan. 5.—Lauren Hesley with his truck has been busy this week hauling shale for the driveway about the residence of Mr. Gadman at North Main street. Mr. Hesley has several assistants at the work. The shale is taken from Mrs. Ole Burger's quarry property at West Shokan Heights. It is of an excellent grade for the purpose.

Judge and Mrs. Lester S. Davis were entertained as dinner guests Monday evening at the home of Deputy and Mrs. Claude Bell, proprietors of the Watson Hollow Garage.

Chester Lyons of Ashokan, go-getter Chevrolet dealer and Olive's popular fourth term supervisor, was a caller here on Monday afternoon. "Chet" reports having already booked seven sedan orders for the 1933 job.

All extend congratulations to the former neighbors, Mr. and Mrs. Nelson Bell, now of Shokan, who celebrated the 55th anniversary of their wedding Christmas day.

Judge and Mrs. Lester S. Davis, in company with Deputy and Mrs. Claude Bell, spent Saturday night and Sunday as guests at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Torino of the South Boulevard. The pleasant occasion was in honor of Mrs. Torino's birthday.

Willing neighbors turned out in force Monday giving Farmer Gardner Donahoe of Krumville a big lift at a wood sawing bee. The day's job netted a heap estimated at 75 cords. Some job.

The school children are sympathizing keenly with their teacher, Mrs. West, who feels very badly over the accident which befell her pet Chow dog recently. It was badly injured when struck by a passing automobile near her home in Allaben.

Mr. and Mrs. Justin Bell and daughter, Virginia, of Brooklyn have returned after spending the holidays among relatives at their former homes in Olive. Mrs. Bell's niece, Miss Georgianna Marshall, of Grand Gorge, accompanied them for a visit in the city.

Such delightful weather, but according to the law of averages it surely must be made up with hard weather later on, and perhaps that in April.

Charles Hesley, West Shokan Heights farmer, butchered a well fattened beef cow on Tuesday, a portion of which Mr. Hesley plans to corn down for later use.

Mrs. Katie Davis of Krumville visited her daughters, Mrs. John Marshall and Mrs. Cecil Gray, in Olive Bridge on Monday.

An event of January 3, 1906, was the wedding of Fred W. Bishop of Arkville and Miss Charlotte M. Huggins of Prattville. A wedding reception was held at the home of the groom's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Watson Bishop, in the old village of West Shokan. Mr. and Mrs. Bishop, who are deceased for a number of years, were the parents of Donald and Bob Bishop.

The weather was so warm on Wednesday that Chase Davis found solace from the warm rays of the mid-winter sun in the shade near the barn while chopping wood.

Miss Marian Davis of West Shokan Heights called on Miss Lydia Scott of Shokan on Wednesday morning.

Mrs. Fred L. Weidner of North street is ill at her home with grip.

Contractor Albert North is employed at Hickory Hill Poultry Farm. Judge Fred L. Weidner of North Main street was a Kingston shopper on Wednesday.

The Ladies' Aid Society assembled in the basement of the church on Wednesday, where it enjoyed a very pleasant day's quilting.

A sad event of 20 years ago which occurred in the old village of West Shokan was the death of Miss Mae Every, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Martin Every. Miss Every was one of the community's most popular young ladies, never too proud to speak to even the humblest who passed her door. She was an accomplished musician and for several years previous to her death was organist in the Shokan Methodist Church. She was taken ill on Christmas Day and died a few days later. The funeral, which was the last held in the old village, took place at her home on New Years Day, 1913. Mae was the idol of her father and mother, who never to the day of their deaths recovered from the tragic blow dealt them. Father, mother and daughter are buried in the Cold Brook cemetery.

Another death of 20 years ago was that of Mrs. Mary Ann Boice on December 26, 1912, which occurred at the home of her son, Cyrenne, in Richmond, Virginia. Mrs. Boice was the only sister of Martin H. Crispell and was born on the old homestead at West Shokan. She was the wife of John P. Boice and the mother of a family of six children: Henry of Phoenixia, Case of Hall, Maryland, Mrs. Henry Winchell of Kingston, Mrs. Byrd Tingo of Blackfoot, Idaho, wife of a prominent newspaper publisher, and Cyrenne, the well known lumber king of the south, now deceased. The oldest child died in infancy. Preceding her death Mrs. Boice had spent some time here with her daughter, Mrs. Winchell, then residing in Shokan. John P. and Lemuel Boice, his brother, were among the pioneer lumbermen of the town of Olive. The latter was also connected with the tanning industry and in 1855 built the tannery at Boiceville. The old stone chimney is still standing as a lonely landmark among a young forest of pines growing on the city property.

Flashes of Life Sketches in Brief

By The Associated Press

Recher Is Lost.
New York.—Fritz Krebber, violinist, doesn't feel happy. Arriving here to keep engagements, while his wife remains abroad resting from an illness, he said:

"This is the first time in 35 years we have been separated like this and I feel really lost. It supports my belief love is above all else, even the career of an artist, or a musician."

What a Pleasure:

Media, Pa.—Prosper J. Boudart of Chester could scarcely believe his ears. "Will anyone volunteer to taste this alleged wine?" asked Judge Charles C. Greer during a liquor trial. The rest of the spectators gasped but Boudart rose to the emergency. In fact he bounded, took one gulp. "Ah," he said. "This is real wine, your honor." "Thank you," said the judge. "The pleasure was all mine. I assure you," said Prosper.

His Error

Chicago.—As the police tell it, Thomas Bolger, had the right idea but the wrong technique.

He is accused of being in the tailoring establishment of Samuel Green when Mr. and Mrs. Green were asleep. It seems he stubbed his toe, awakening Mrs. Green, who said: "Tommy! Tommy! get back in your box."

"Meecow—Meecow" said Bolger, who is a fast thinker.

When police came in response to Mrs. Green's telephone call Bolger learned that he should have said "bow-wow." Mrs. Green's Tommy isn't a cat. It is a wire haired terrier.

100,000 Chirrup

New York.—One hundred thousand birds are chirping defiance at police and for once, police are stumped. Starlings in a dense cloud arrive each night to roost on the gigantic Metropolitan Museum of Art, perching each night on every window sill, on the roof and all the exterior statuary. The multitudinous chirping, keeps apartment dwellers awake.

Maybe One Could.

Seattle.—Culter may come to the dog-washing business. The University of Washington employment bureau received this query from a Californian who aspires to the higher education: "Could one work his way through college by washing dogs?" The bureau secretary isn't sure yet.

Ah, Woe Is He.

Bismarck, N. D.—To one person at this session of the state legislature rolls mean grief. He is the clerk of the house, the membership of which includes two Andersons, two Ericksons, three Hansons, two Laksons, three Nelsons, two Olsons, two Petersons and two Sundbys.

All For Naught

San Jose, Calif.—A woman driver struggled at the wheel of her car, which stood at an angle between two big trucks parked at a curb. Jimmy Glynn, newspaper artist, volunteered to help her. After considerable hard work Jimmy got the car parked snugly between the trucks. "You can't stay here long," he told the feminine driver, "because it's a loading zone."

"But I was trying to get out," she said.

Writer Of Child Plays A Believer

Frances Hodgson Burnett, author of "Sara Crewe", which is to be presented at the Broadway Theatre on Friday afternoon, January 20, at 4 o'clock, by the Clare Tree Major Children's Theatre Company, believed strongly in fairies and in the fairy power. This belief in fairies and in the magic transformation often wrought by superhuman power was written into the stories that have since brought delight to countless children.

Frances Hodgson was born in Manchester, England, on November 24, 1849. Her family removed to America in 1865 and settled in New Market, Tenn. She taught school there for a winter, and later wrote her first stories for "Peterson's Ladies' Magazine", Scribner's and other magazines of the day. She left New Market in 1872 for New York and the following year married Dr. Burnett, an oculist located in Washington, D. C. She moved to Washington in 1877 to be with her husband. She later divided her time between Washington, New York and Europe.

Other famous stories and plays by Mrs. Burnett are "Little Lord Fauntleroy", "Esmeralda", "A Lady of Quality", and "The Secret Garden", which has been acted with much success by The Children's Theatre Company.

Youth, 20, Runs 261-Acre Farm And His Books Show No Red Ink

Harold Umbaugh, of Nappanee, Ind., is only 20, but he operates a 261-acre farm, and what's more, makes it pay. Here he is figuring out some of the problems of management.

Nappanee, Ind. (A).—Managing a 261-acre farm—not only managing it, but also doing much of the work—probably would be regarded by most farmers as a man-sized job.

And when the manager is a youth of 20, most farmers undoubtedly would say he had a full-time job.

And then if he succeeded for three years—especially these last three—in keeping books without the use of red ink and managing the farm while going to school, almost any farmer would have to admit he had done a good job.

That is what 20-year-old Harold Umbaugh succeeded in doing with his part-time job of operating a farm near here, but he still calls himself a "future farmer."

Future Farmers of America is an association of about 65,000 boys who have succeeded in an agricultural project more advanced than the work outlined for 4-H Club members.

Harold was chosen to represent Indiana at the national congress of the association at Kansas City, Mo., and came home with a "fourth degree" gold medal, the highest honor awarded in the organization.

Umbaugh lives on one farm with his grandfather, and operates it in conjunction with adjoining land owned by his sister, a school teacher.

For three years he has been the managing head of the enterprise. Two of those years he also was attending school doing his work before and after classes.

It is a full-fledged farm that Harold operates, with livestock, diversified crops and the attendant problem of treating calves with the colic, chickens with the pip and horses with the heaves.

This year he had 25 acres of wheat, 25 acres of oats, 25 of corn, 14 of clover, 25 of soybeans, 14 in hay, besides pasture.

For three years since the death of his father he has made the farm pay, according to his records. "It is my herd of ten dairy cattle that is making money now," he explains.

The secret of success, he adds, is work, plans, and more work. His ambition is to have a dairy herd that produces more milk than any herd he knows.

"I have a few cows now," he says. "I am going to start raising good calves, making 'cows of them and gradually improving my herd."

Zionist Meeting In Albany Sunday

Inclusion of all Zionist organizations in New York state outside Greater New York and Buffalo will be one of the proposals discussed at the meeting of the Hudson Valley Zionist Region in Albany on Sunday.

The convention is expected to attract hundreds of Zionists from the nine communities at present represented and from communities invited to affiliate.

The convention, to be held in the Hotel Tenbyck during the afternoon, will be followed by a dinner in the vestry rooms of Temple Beth Emeth, and by a rally in the evening, also in Beth Emeth. Morris Rothenberg, president of the Zionist Organization of America, and Rabbi Stephen S. Wise, will be the speakers at the rally.

Thomas Boyd Thatcher, mayor of Albany is expected to deliver an address of welcome to the convention, which will then proceed to election of regional officers and other business. Rabbi Maurice J. Bloom, Newburgh, is the 1932 president.

Communities represented in the region now are Schenectady, Albany, Troy, Hudson, Kingston, Poughkeepsie, Peekskill, Newburgh and Monticello. Invitations have also gone out to Zionists in Rochester, Utica, Binghamton, Syracuse, Saratoga Springs, Gloversville and other communities.

A small hillside cemetery overlooking a peaceful valley in Letcher county, Kentucky, contains the graves of 19 murder victims, most of them killed in feud strife.

Savings and Loan Annual Meeting

The annual meeting of the Kingston Co-operative Savings and Loan Association will be held this evening at the offices of the association, 293 Wall street. The meeting will be called at 7:30 o'clock to receive and act upon the annual reports of the officers and for the election of directors and inspectors of election for the ensuing year. Polls will be open from 7:30 until 9 p. m. A new series of installment shares will commence at this time.

Italians Denounce Jugoslavians Acts In Coast Province

Rome, Jan. 5.—(Radio-Jugoslav) reports are received again, recalling the dangerous point they reached in 1927.

Bitterly-worded interpellations have been made in the chamber of deputies and the senate on Jugoslavian anti-Italian actions.

Anti-Jugoslav and occasional anti-French demonstrations have been made at Milan, Rome, Naples, Venice, Trieste and Zara.

Some lines started from Newspapers print repeated accusations against the neighboring country, and reproduce corresponding statements published in Jugoslavia.

Some lines continue off from the outbreak came of the latest tension. They stood in the public square of the Jugoslavian village of Trani, near Spalato. Lions of St. Mark, they were symbols of the former dominion of Venice over that territory.

On January 5th they were blown to bits by dynamite. Italian papers said the action was inspired and countenanced by Jugoslavian authorities.

Parliament Aims Grievance

Students paraded in Milan, shouting "Down with Jugoslavia! Dalmatia is Italian!"

The Italian government's attention was called officially to the dynamiting by interpellations in parliament.

Regent Dusan called the Trani incident "an act of vandalism" and demanded:

"What will our government do to safeguard the international convention imposing on the government at Belgrade respect for civilization in Dalmatia?"

Following that came Jugoslavia's supposed new program of naval construction, calling for the building of sixteen light warships, including two cruisers, six destroyers, two submarines and six submarine chasers.

Knowing the close relations between France and Jugoslavia, the Italian press is printing columns on the French naval deficit and a slight weakness of the fleet.

It is pointing an accusing finger at the recent meeting of the general staffs of the "little entente"—Jugoslavia, Czechoslovakia and Rumania—with which countries France is on the friendliest terms. These four nations, says the Giornale d'Italia of Rome, "constitute the most formidable armed force in the world."

Spanish What Talks To Talk.

Madrid, (AP).—Spanish movie fans apparently want to hear speech in foreign talkies irrespective of whether they understand them.

When sound was shut off from an American film recently the theater became a bledium until the voices were restored. Theater proprietors believe the fans must be mostly students of languages.

JEWISH CIRCLE

MERTS TONIGHT

The regular Friday night circle will be held tonight in the auditorium adjoining the Center. The program which will include a short service, songs, lecture, discussion and entertainment, is to commence at 7:30 o'clock.

The topic for tonight's lecture is "Why Religion?"

The public is cordially invited. Last Friday night's lecture on "The Fish and the Spirit," was of great interest and value. The Rabbi urged his appreciative audience to neglect neither body or soul but to use both of them with discretion and to temper one with the other. The audience was very much pleased. It promised to do its utmost to make the circle a success.

Crispness Becomes a Desirable Attribute

New York—A faint rustle of fabric is heard in smart places. There are those who believe we will hear more of it as spring goes underway. There is a crisp note about many of the new trimmings. And there is a tendency toward tailored silhouettes, because of that swishy sound and also because of their dependability in keeping in line.

At the moment, styles do not seem to be concerned with soft boyish types, but rather with frocks that have clear-cut lines and body enough to keep them tailored. If the choice is jersey, or some soft fabric, it is stitched, or cut on angular lines, or treated in some way in order to conform to a military line.

Repeated mention of the guimpé frock has been made, but it cannot be too much emphasized, judging from the first display of Southern frocks. There are suspender frocks too, first cousins to the guimpé frock, and well worth acknowledging. Have you seen any of those new evening dresses inspired by the shirtwaist-and-skirt motif of the Gibson Girl era—some with jabots? They are amusing, and practical, too. And have you seen the new cotton-lace dance frocks, prettiest, perhaps, in exotic colors?

If you are one who likes tunics, we have good news for you. They are to continue. And if you like pleats, there is, among the advance spring models, much that will please you.

One's first spring preoccupation is usually the hat and, while there are rumors of changes, particularly in crowns, there is nothing to warrant any uneasiness for the head that is to wear these crowns. Most of us feel that, having survived all the tricks milliners have tried on us, we should have nothing further to bear at their hands.

DID YOU KNOW THAT

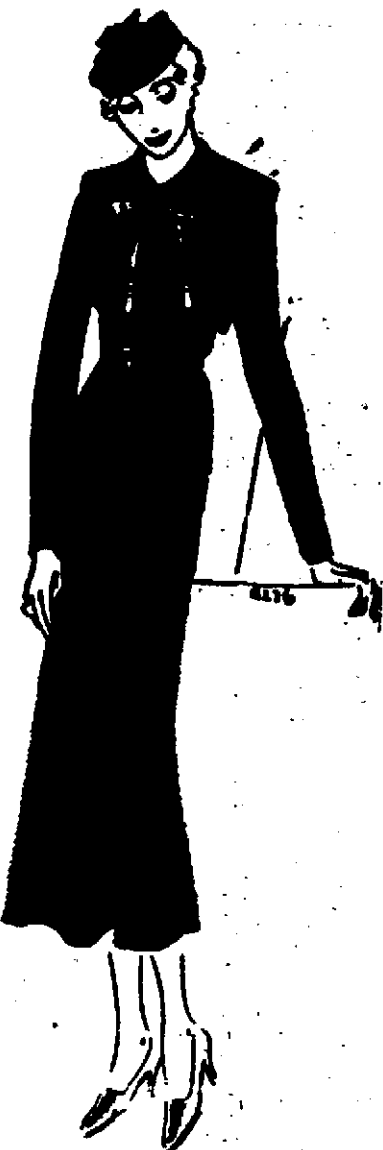

The bib gilet, detachable in dresses and in suits, is a frequently seen detail in spring collections.

Hand-work, particularly drawn work that forms rakes and fagoting of the most delicate description, is very much on view this year.

At The Theatres

Today.

Kingston: "Life Begins". Exceptional entertainment, this story that is laid in the maternity ward of a hospital, where life begins and sometimes ends as well. Human nature is shown here in colorful cross-section, and mingled with the sorrow and tragedy of everyday life, there are moments of superlative comedy blended into the theme. Eric Linden, as the husband of a girl convicted of murder who is seeing her last bit of life in the hospital, gives his finest performance to date, and Loretta Young as the young wife is understandingly human. Others in the unusually gifted cast include Aline MacMahon, Dorothy Peterson, Glenda Farrell, Ernest Foster, Vivienne Osborne, and Gilbert Roland. One of the year's outstanding pictures.

Orpheum: "Party Girl" and "Hidden Gold." Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., Jeanette Loff and Marie Prevost are the principal players in the first feature. Tom Mix and Tony, his famous horse, are together in the second talkie, a fast moving western melodrama with the usual Mix thrills.

Broadway: "The Maddock Revue" on the stage, and "Monte Carlo Madness" on the screen. The stage show, with a cast of 25 performers, features James Cagney, formerly of Earl Carroll's Vanities. Songs, choruses, comedy and dances are blended into this travelling musical comedy show. "Monte Carlo Madness" is a melodrama of royalty, in which love finds a way to break down old customs and barriers. Sari Martin, newest European sensation, is the featured player.

Tomorrow: Kingston: "Silver Dollar." Edward G. Robinson and a cast of hundreds bring back to life and reality the amazing story of the building of the west. This talkie, swiftest in character portrayal and direction, is one of the really big pictures of the year. Based on actual fact, the story concerns pioneer Yates Martin who leaves the east for Colorado and gold. His task is one of constant struggle against poverty and hunger, but he is blessed with luck from the beginning. Instead of finding gold he finds silver, and becomes enormously wealthy. With millions behind him, he builds public buildings, takes public office and becomes the west's outstanding figure. He gives up his wife for a younger and prettier woman, and has the president of the United States at his wedding. When Silver is legislated out of the currency picture, Yates Martin becomes a pauper and he dies in poverty. A moving, electrifying picture of early America, that is well worth seeing. Aline MacMahon and Bobe Dolan are also in the cast.

Broadway: "Sun." Orpheum: "Sun."

Carries Eggs in Mouth
Until They Are Hatched
There are several species of fish known as "mouthbrooders," but the breeding behavior is similar in all. The fish, either male or female, or both, according to the species, clear a space in the sand at the bottom of the aquarium, into which the female deposits her eggs. The male then carries the eggs in his mouth and carries them through the period of incubation and for a few days after the fry are hatched. The Ruby Jewel fish usually turns the fry loose in about three weeks, while the Tilapia will carry the eggs and fry as long as six weeks. The Ruby Jewel fish is somewhat exceptional in that it first sticks its eggs to a flat stone before picking them up. Otherwise the behavior is as described.

Milk is Rich
Milk is a mine of minerals. Super-nutrients at Cornell university and a Scotch dairy research institute show that in addition to phosphorus and calcium, milk contains magnesium, potassium, iron, copper, zinc, aluminum, manganese, silicon, boron, titanium, vanadium, niobium, strontium, and rubidium.

Ancient Pottery Found
Cave explorers in Czechoslovakia recently found some valuable ancient pottery. The caves were occupied by prehistoric men.

UP IN THE AIR
Airmail service has been established between London and Japan.
China has led the world in the value of American airplane imports this year.
The average salary of air mail and transport pilots is about $500 a month.
Russian airlines now make second only to those of the United States in mileage.

No fewer than 25 per cent of the passengers on air lines in the United States are women.

Airmen (aboard driving car over cliff)—Here, old man! I quite forget this wasn't a plane.

California leads the states in the number of landing fields, having 172. Texas ranks second with 147 and Pennsylvania is third with 107.

The British airplane Firefly, claimed to be the fastest in the world and capable of flying four miles a minute, was shown at the Paris Aero show.

Egyptian women have caught the craze for aviation, which is sweeping Egypt, and are learning to fly. Crowds watch every air circus and indulge in short joy rides.

Middlesex flyers late to dinner no longer can have the excuse that they did not know what time it was. An enormous black stone clock with an upturned face has been installed at the Middlesex airfield in England. It can be read from 3,000 feet in the day and floodlighted by night can be read from an altitude of 1,000 feet.

IN GREAT BRITAIN

Only one woman in Great Britain practices the profession of tea-tasting.

Traffic lights have been installed in more than 200 towns in Great Britain.

London has only fifty automatic telephone exchanges, covering 220,000 lines.

Slaughter-houses belonging to private owners in this country number about 10,000.

There are 250 trade unions in the civil service alone, one of them having only six members.

Last year over 100,000,000 postcards were collected from telephone call boxes in the London area alone.

One London manufacturer, whose factory did not exist nine years ago, is now turning out 250,000 toys a week.

Practically all telephone equipment used here is now British made, less than 1 per cent of the total being imported from abroad.

MRS. MARY MOORE WAS HOSPITAL SUPERINTENDENT

Miss Mary A. C. Moore, former superintendent of the Kingston Hospital, died at her home in Albany Thursday morning, after a protracted illness. Mrs. Moore came to the Kingston Hospital as its superintendent in October, 1898, and through her efforts the Nurses Alumnae was formed. During 1903-4, Miss Moore was instrumental in having the hospital recognized by the State Regents. It was registered and became affiliated with Bellevue for obstetrics and pediatrics.

During the 18 years of the Miss Moore's superintendency of faithful and efficient service, many of the older nurses still practicing, received their careful training and it is with sincere regret that they learn of her demise. Miss Moore's pleasing personality, kindness, comforting spirit and methodical methods made for her many friends among the patients during her incumbency.

She retired from the hospital 16 years ago to return to her home in Albany where she resided until her death.

The funeral will be held from her late home Saturday morning and will be attended by many of the nurses from this city and vicinity.

The January term of county court will be convened Monday afternoon at 2 o'clock with County Judge Frederick G. Traver presiding. Outdoors Good Place for Lighting Effects Study

The study of lighting effects need not be carried on solely indoors, in theater, gallery, hall or home.

There is plenty of room for such interest in the great outdoors, where the sources of all light exist in their abundance.

Closer inspection of natural objects shows that they are not all grayed uniformly, but clouds and back of sun shine, but still reflect what light there is according to their nature.

Thus one tree will have an appearance different from adjoining trees, owing to a different sort of bark, or position, which permits reflected light to filter to it.

Houses, in particular, appear in entirely different lights on days dark and mimical, as we say. It may be said of them, in particular, that if they appear to advantage on a rainy, gloomy day, they will shine like jewels when the sun is throwing its beams upon them.

No one should ever purchase a home without first visiting it on some gloomy day, preferably when it is "pouring cats and dogs," as the old saying has it.

If it looks well then, it will please always.

Something of the same pleasant philosophy might be applied to all life and living, but we would not care to press the matter, for so much depends upon the individual, and his ability to accept, as well as to utilize.—Washington Evening Star.

And Steals Gems Of Betty Compton

Hollywood, Calif., Jan. 4 (AP).—Miss Betty Compton last night reported a bandit entered her home and stole a diamond necklace and a pair of earrings valued at $41,500. The actress and D. Lusk, her ex-production manager, with whom she was playing, were both bound and gagged. Miss Compton was sitting in the living room of her home when the door bell rang. She opened it and saw a man dressed in the uniform of a messenger boy, holding a yellow envelope in his hand. The man pushed his way through the door, drew a revolver and said this is a stickup. I know my business and if you make any squeak I'll be you both down. He then marched both Miss Compton and Lusk to the upstairs bedroom of the actress where he bound their hands and feet with piano wire and gagged them. This completed, he turned to Miss Compton and began to blind her hands and feet also. Before taping her mouth, however, he forced her to tell him where she kept her jewelry, threatening to kill her outright if she refused to comply. She told him. The robber then taped her mouth, and the valuables and fled. Miss Compton was able to free herself 15 minutes later. She untied herself and then notified police.

MARY'S HOLY NAME

BREAFAST ON SUNDAY

On Sunday morning at the 8 o'clock Mass in St. Mary's Church members of the Holy Name Society, together with other male members of the parish will receive communion in body. Following the reception of communion, the men will enjoy a communion breakfast in St. Mary's school hall. The principal speaker at the breakfast will be the Rev. William D. Cunningham, who is a favorite as a speaker throughout the diocese on such occasions. Final preparations for the breakfast have been completed and a record attendance is anticipated.

The triduum being held in St. Mary's Church this week for the men of the parish has been very successful. Tonight the Rev. Charles Reilly, S.E.R., will again deliver the sermon, which will be followed by benediction. The solemn closing of the triduum will be held on Sunday evening.

A SEAT in the CABINET?

JAMES A. FARLEY
(EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the first of a series of daily articles picturing leading men and women mentioned for posts in the Roosevelt Cabinet.)

If James A. (Big Jim) Farley of New York does not become postmaster general in the Roosevelt cabinet that fact will be more surprising to political onlookers than any other the Roosevelt cabinet slate perhaps could produce.

From the hour when his victory was conceded, it has been tacitly accepted on all sides that Mr. Roosevelt would turn to Farley to fill that portfolio.

A newcomer to national politics, this big, buoyant director of the Roosevelt nomination and election campaign seems to have found a job of work to his liking as contact-man-in-chief throughout 48 states for Mr. Roosevelt.

He has youth, a temperament that takes the tumult and shouting of national political life easily, abundant energy and a liking for meeting folks of all sorts that stood him in good stead as state Democratic chairman first, then as national chairman, both of which jobs he still holds.

And it was to Farley and Louis McH. Howe that Mr. Roosevelt promptly ascribed chief credit for his election.

Must "Take-Off" on Water
The loon cannot take flight from land. Water is necessary to these birds for a satisfactory "take off" and they get under way by swimming rapidly for a distance before trying to rise into the air.

Nias Island

Masked Dancer of Nias Island.

Prepared by National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.—W.F. Service.

ALTHOUGH it has been nearly 1,100 years since Nias Island, lying in the Indian ocean off the coast of Sumatra, was first mentioned in history by the Mohammedan merchant Soleyman, today it shows less progress than many more isolated spots on the world map.

Neither wireless nor cable connects the island with civilization, and only when an occasional boat calls does it have contact with other lands. Yet there flourished an ancient civilization.

Nias is about 80 miles in length. The north end of the island is rather barren and uninteresting, and at times the traveler's ardor is somewhat weakened by the intense heat, hard-baked trails which are steep and slippery, and the meagerness of food and shelter.

But all these hardships are forgotten when he reaches the rich cities in the South and is lost in admiration of this present-day example of a long-ago civilization.

Centuries ago adventure and possibly shipwreck brought inhabitants to these shores; and here, cut off from the world through generations, these people developed their own laws, their own art and methods of warfare.

Here primitive people built great cities with paved streets, carved enormous stones where ghosts of their ancestors were wont to sit; and here, even today, warriors wear metal armor, while their chiefs have coats of gold, dedicated to use by human sacrifice. Yet comparatively few people have ever heard of the island of Nias.

In their early trade with the Spice Islands, European ships sought the sheltered waters along the east coast of Sumatra, passing through the Strait of Malacca; and today this same route is taken by the richly laden ships plying between the East and the West.

Island of Gold.

Soleyman tells us that the early Nias people were rich in gold; that they ate coconuts and covered their bodies with the oil; that when a man wished to marry he had to take the head of an enemy. If he took two heads, he could take two wives; if he obtained 50, he could have that many wives.

In manuscripts of later periods, chiefly Arabic, occasional references are made to this island. Ancient maps locate an Island of Gold near the present site of Nias, and the Portuguese in 1520 outfitted an unsuccessful expedition to search for it.

Except for minor visits, Nias attracted little attention from the Dutch until the middle of the Nineteenth century, when they established stations at several points in the North and South. But nature came to the aid of unfriendly natives in keeping the island isolated. In 1861 a series of earthquakes, accompanied by a great tidal wave, destroyed the coast settlements, and a little later uprisings drove the Dutch from the greater part of the island. It is only during the last 20 years that the white man has really ruled the land.

Little villages with palm-fringed beaches are on the eastern shore of the island. Inland, through the heat haze of the valleys, one can see clumps of coconut trees on the hillside, almost hiding the brown-roofed houses of other villages. Occasionally the green background is pierced by the white spire of a German mission.

The houses in the villages are round, raised high above the ground, and the bamboo-barred windows, as well as raised portions of the roofs, are filled with men, women and children. They are a sickly looking lot, their yellow color suggesting undernourishment and much malaria. Half the year these people live on rice and half on sweet potatoes, but there is never enough of either.

Money Means Little to Them.

Undertaken as they are, they have little ambition to cultivate the fruit and vegetables which might give them more vigor. Money is of little use to them, save for the most part taking the place of currency, and to obtain carriers is a real problem for the traveler. The natives do not want money and can use no use in working. Occasionally they go down to the coast and buy a bit of cloth from the Chinese traders, but in the interior money has little value.

When a man buys a wife he pays for her with pigs. The theft of a pig is punishable with death.

Throughout the Dutch East Indies there are, at intervals, government rest houses where weary officials or other travelers may spend the night. A mandarin, a native "boy" who knows more or less about cooking, is in charge. In Nias, outside of Goenoeang Strail, a coast village, there is just one of these houses, a large building which formerly was the home of a German missionary.

Lolowa, which is reached during the second day's travel inland, is an interesting place. The chief is an old man, but a lively one. Recently visitors found him wearing a wonderful upstanding mustache of gold, a high headband with golden ornaments, and an enormous earring.

When he danced with the other men, leaping high in the air and performing strange antics with the greatest agility, one could well believe the reports that he had had his fun at taking heads. He fondly stroked a worn and weathered old wooden figure which stood in front of his house and explained that it was his grandfather.

Ancestors are not dead, according to the Nias idea. They live somewhere else, but are still interested in their descendants. Through offerings and sacrifices made to the small wooden figures, the advice and assistance of the dead are sought by the living.

In some sections, after a death, the relatives and a magician gather at the grave and invoke the spirit of the deceased to come to the wooden figure which has been prepared for the occasion. All watch intently for a spider, for it is in this form that the soul will become visible on the grave. When at last the insect is caught, it is taken to the house and placed near the figure into which it is expected to disappear.

These wooden figures are not only intermediaries between the living and the dead, but are guardians of the homes, custodians of matrimony, and protectors against curses of the enemy.

Magicians Are Numerous.

Almost every village has at least one magician or medium, a man or woman who can talk with the spirits through the wooden images. These magicians must learn all the formulas, must know the names of all the spirits to be invoked, and during the ceremonies they must carry out all the instructions of the spirits. They are believed to be able to cause rain or make the sun shine, to forestall the future, and to bring good crops. They can determine which are the lucky days for marriage, for cutting bamboo, for starting a journey, or for any other undertaking.

When a Nias chief has a pain in his stomach, he believes that some spirit in the other world is trying to get control of him, and it is necessary to sacrifice a chicken. If the pain is extreme, he might have to sacrifice a man.

Lature, a deified ancestor, fishes with a net which is the rainbow, and when the people see this they are greatly alarmed, for they know that he will catch them if they do not at once offer sacrifices.

The old chief entertains some travelers royally. He brings warriors with spears and shields to perform mock battles and give weird dances. To the accompaniment of drums, he sings the visitors' praises at great length, the warriors shouting their approval at the end of each line.

Coconut trees are the Nias substitute for a soda fountain. A coconuts scrambles up a tall tree and throws down green nuts. With a few strokes of his long knife, a man deftly cuts away the husk, making a small hole in the nut. With mouth pressed tightly against this, one drinks the sweet water.

Lolowa was once a city of 2,000 inhabitants, whose houses, erected in two long rows, faced a paved court. In front of the houses are stone slabs, polished like glass and wonderfully carved, beneath which the people place the skulls of their ancestors. Tall pillars of stone form backs to the "seats" and, resting on these places of honor, the skulls of the ancestors. It is believed that part in the festivities of the mortals.

Writing materials are called stationery

The word stationer is from
